To whom it may concern.

It is with great regret that I hereby submit my formal resignation.

I have enjoyed working for you all, though at times have found it a little difficult and I know my slowness and temperamental nature has made it difficult at times.

I didn't mind the abuse at first as it seemed to be good natured, but it soon became the norm and my ability to perform the basic functions asked has become a daily grind. Some of the work I'm asked to produce is mind numbingly dull and fails to stretch even my most basic abilities.

Your grasp of grammar is rudimentary and I question your competence I cannot see the situation becoming any better and therefore am unable to carry on working for you.

Regards, Your Printer.

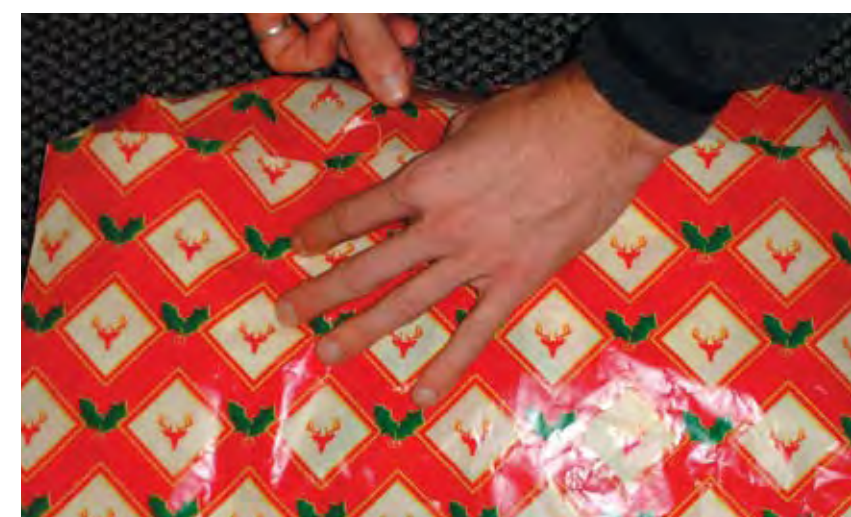

These empty advent calendars were sent to 150 Auckland businesses, to remind them, that without their help, some less fortunate children would have nothing to look forward to at Christmas.

The Hallensteins Christmas bag. Let's face it, blokes don't like wrapping presents or buying Christmas cards. That's why Hallensteins changed the design of their bags so they could double as wrapping paper and gift card.

Simply fold over, write on the greeting card...

tape up...

and hey presto, instant gift wrapping.
